Course Description:

Considers the nature of London's museums and art galleries and their role and function in our society and culture since the 17th century. The course also provides students with a critical understanding of the various historical, cultural, social, international, and political contexts that have shaped British art and architecture from 1650 onwards. Students study the workings of the art market and a variety of other topics that impinge upon it, such as conservation, restoration, the investment potential of art, and art-world crime. The course enables students to study and discuss London's art and architecture firsthand through regular visits to buildings and museums.

Prerequisites:

40 Credits

Students will not be able to take the four-credit version of this course if they had previously taken this three-credit course.

Aims and Objectives:

- To introduce students with a major in Art History and Visual Culture or for those interested in careers in museum or gallery work, to the museums and galleries of London.
- To provide a historical overview of key developments in British Art and Architecture since 1650.

Assessment:

This course conforms to the University Assessment Norms approved at Academic Board and located at: <https://www.richmond.ac.uk/university-policies/>

Teaching Methodology:

Classes will take the form of presentations by the lecturer with appropriate audiovisual support and in-class focused group discussion and exercises. In the museum and gallery situation, students will be divided into small groups and directed in close visual analysis and discussion. It should be noted that discussion will comprise a major element of this course and all students are expected to verbalise their thoughts and perceptions and to develop a critical response to the material under consideration. They must keep up with assignments, be prepared to ask questions, and discuss their readings. It is not possible to do well in this class if you do not participate.
