Course Description: This course complements the work undertaken in AVC 6405 New Media & Visual Power. Through theoretical and empirical insights into our image-based culture, this course deals with the multifariousness of contemporary visibility. Integrating traditional elements of visual analysis and visual methodologies with new media and transmedia approaches, the course enables students to develop a conceptual framework within which to evaluate the role of the visual in contemporary society and culture – moving from issues of production, image dissemination, to consumption (reception theory). The course is based around 4 broad themes: Feminist Art History; Representing World Cultures; Visualizing the Other; Art & Space. In a program of gallery visits and theoretical discussions, students learn about visual representation and various ways of encountering the complexity of imagery in the twentieth/twenty-first century.

Prerequisites: AVC 5215

Aims and Objectives: The aim of this course is to explore key themes in contemporary visual culture from the early 20th century to the present day. It examines key texts, artworks, films, documentaries, and cultural events providing students with an understanding of how visual culture has developed from the early 20th century to the present. Throughout the course students will examine a range of examples and case studies chosen from conceptual, performance and installation art, graphic novels, graphic design and comics, design history, film studies, television and moving images, advertising, corporate communication, public art and other contemporary visually-engaged practices. Analyses of key case studies will provide students with an understanding of how visual culture has developed from the early 20th century to the present, with a primary focus on cultural context.

Assessment:

This course conforms to the Richmond University Standard Assessment Norms approved at Learning and Teaching Policy Committee found at:
<http://www.richmond.ac.uk/content/academic-affairs/academic-standing.aspx>.

Teaching Methodology:

Classes are conducted in an interactive fashion by addressing issues close to the students' interests as well as exploiting the opportunities of London's exciting cultural life. The aim is to balance the presentation of material in lecture format with in-class discussions, individual/group student contributions, and visits. Three weeks will be spent on each broad "theme", incorporating various areas of analysis across time periods (art, design, film, print, photography, video, computer).
