Course Description:

Addresses issues that relate to the interpretation, perception and representation of the visual arts in other ('non-western') cultures, globally, with a focus on indigenous ('ethnographic') and prehistoric ('archaeological') art, known as 'World Art'. Students are encouraged to investigate issues that relate to engaging with art across cultures, and consider critically colonial/neo-colonial encounters and the representation and display of other cultures. A range of case studies will be examined, which may include the representations and interventions of indigenous peoples and prehistoric art in the Americas, Africa, Oceania and Europe.

Pre-requisites and/or Co-requisites: MA Art History and Visual Culture students only

Aims and Objectives:

- To introduce students to the construction of the concept of 'world arts'
- To examine the colonial and post-colonial history of research on indigenous and prehistoric visual cultures
- To engage with the range of inter-disciplinary theories and methods for approaching and interpreting art across cultures
- To examine a variety of examples of 'world arts' in context
- To analyse the representation of 'world arts' in museums and galleries
- To consider the circulation of 'world arts' in the dealer critic system

Programme Outcomes:

At the end of this course, the students will have achieved the following programme outcomes:

Teaching Methodology:

SEMINARS

The course will consist of weekly postgraduate seminars, which will follow the structure set out within the course syllabus and will serve a number of functions: seminars provide a framework for the course; address critically the relevant literature in specific areas, examine concepts, theories and case studies, and enable students to engage in group discussion and dialogue, and autonomous learning. Seminars rely upon active student participation, mediated by the course instructor. By examining and discussing issues and problems in a seminar setting, students as junior research colleagues will be able to learn from each other and resolve questions that arise in the course of the lectures and readings. Seminars will only be useful to the extent that they are prepared for and participation in discussions and debates is an essential aspect of this. All students will be required to participate. Tutorial opportunities will also be available for research supervision and other academic support.
