Course Description:

This course takes an interdisciplinary approach to analyse London-based social and environmental needs. Students will discuss key texts related to service learning and apply a range of planning and research techniques to deliver a community-based project related to a chosen social or environmental issue. Students will use local resources when available including registered not-for-profit and community-based organizations and reflect critically on their ability to create a positive contribution to society. Students will engage in community-based service learning, with guided academic tasks and reflection.

Prerequisites: n/a

Aims and Objectives:

The aim of this course is to equip students with the practical and theoretical knowledge to engage with London-based social and environmental issues and insofar as possible to create positive change in their communities. Students will gain an array of transferrable academic and employability skills through a critical service-learning approach, including:

- enhanced oral presentation skills, employing a range of digital software and applications
- self-organisational skills through preparation for and completion of a community-based project
- social perceptiveness, effective listening and discussion skills through seminar-style exploratory talk and class discussion
- teamwork, awareness of difference and ethical issues, leadership and communication skills through involvement in a community-based project
- critical thinking and reflective practice, through guided classroom activities and tasks related to service learning

Programme Outcomes:

A1, A2, A5, A9, B1, B2, B3, B4, B5, B7, B8, B9, B10, B11, B12

A detailed list of the programme outcomes are found in the Programme Specification.

Learning Outcomes:

By the end of this course, successful students should be able to:

- understand and implement the enhanced skills required to make an effective evidence-based oral presentation
- apply knowledge of the use of a range of software and applications to carry out specific tasks, including online video presentation skills
- show understanding of the effects of active citizenship both on themselves and others in the community
- demonstrate the ability and commitment to work actively within community contexts and structures
- apply ethical perspectives to a chosen social issue
- select a range of relevant primary and secondary sources to extend their knowledge and understanding of a chosen social issue
- use a range of evidence to formulate appropriate and justified analysis related to a chosen social issue

Assessment:

This course conforms to the Richmond University Service Learning and Internship Assessment Norms approved by LTPC.

Teaching Methodology:

Community-based activities will take the place of some specified time in the classroom, but regular one-to-one or small group meetings to provide support and discuss progress will also take place, leading to individual self-reflection. Students will be encouraged to share experiences and provide peer feedback on classroom tasks and activities. Peer mentors and senior students will also share their related experiences, and student affairs personnel will provide support and advice. Digital fluency skills will be taught and practised in the computer lab and on laptops or personal devices in the classroom, with experimentation outside the classroom.
