

COURSE SPECIFICATION DOCUMENT

Academic School/Department:	Communications, Arts and Social Sciences
Programme:	MA in International Relations
Level:	7
Course Title:	International Relations Theory and Concepts
Course Code:	INR 7101
Course Leader:	Dr Michael Keating
Student Engagement Hours:	200
Seminars:	39
Tutorials:	6
Independent / Guided Learning:	155
Semester:	AUTUMN
Credits:	20 UK CATS credits 10 ECTS credits 4 US credits

Course Description:

This course engages students with the theoretical and conceptual debates that characterise the field of International Relations. Students examine a range of primary texts, both classical (such as Thucydides and Machiavelli) and more contemporary (such as Morgenthau, Bull, Wendt, Mearsheimer, and Keohane). The scholars that are addressed have underpinned the schools of thought that define International Relations theory. The course also addresses broader questions of IR theory: the applicability of theory to contemporary events and the degree to which continuity and change characterise the subject.

Pre-requisites: MA International Relations students only

Aims and Objectives:

- To engage students with the theoretical and conceptual debates that characterise the field of International Relations
- To examine a range of key texts and thinkers in the field of International Relations drawing on classical political theory
- To apply theory and concepts to contemporary events
- To provide an intellectual foundation for progress through the programme.

Programme Outcomes:

At the end of this course, the students will have achieved the following programme

outcomes: A; B; D; F; G

A detailed list of the programme outcomes is found in the Programme Specification. This is maintained by Registry and located at:

<https://www.richmond.ac.uk/programme-and-course-specifications/>

Learning Outcomes:

- At the end of this course, the students will have achieved the following learning outcomes:
- Demonstrate a deep and systematic understanding of some of the central debates, themes and contestations in IR theory, and how they pertain to contemporary events.
  - Develops critical responses to both classical and contemporary IR theorists and their main texts, methodological approaches and core ideas.
  - Exercises initiative in the design and implementation of substantial investigations of central issues in IR theory.
  - Demonstrates the ability to exercise initiative in organising and pursuing reading and research in IR theory.
  - Demonstrates the ability to gather, organise and effectively communicate complex and abstract theoretical frameworks, debates and arguments in International Relations.

Indicative Content:

- The theoretical and conceptual apparatus that characterise the field of International Relations
- Key texts and thinkers in the field of International Relations drawing on classical political theory
- Application of theory and concepts to contemporary events in International Relations
- Critical investigations of core approaches to IR theory – liberal, realist, international school, Marxist, constructivist, poststructuralist, and critical theory
- Key debates both between and within different schools of IR theory

Assessment:

This course conforms to the Richmond University Standard Assessment Norms approved at Academic Board.

FHEQ level	Richmond/UK Level	Normal Number of Items (including final exam)*	Total assessment
LEVEL 7	R7000/UK MA	2-3	5000-7000 words

Teaching Methodology:

SEMINARS

The course will consist of weekly postgraduate seminars, which will follow the structure set out within the course syllabus and will serve a number of functions: seminars provide a framework for the course; address critically the relevant literature in specific areas, examine concepts, theories and case studies, and enable students to engage in group discussion and dialogue, and autonomous learning. Seminars rely upon active student participation, mediated by the Course instructor. By examining and discussing issues and problems in a seminar setting, students as junior research colleagues will be able to learn from each other and resolve questions that arise in the course of the

