Course Description:

This course examines global cinema while considering the extent to which cultural, political, and historical contexts have influenced the form and grammar of film during the last century. The overall focus of the course is broad, ranging across more than eight decades and many different countries; it aims to study a variety of approaches to and theories of narrative cinema. During the semester, many international film "movements" are covered, which can include the French New Wave, the Chinese Sixth Generation, and Italian Neo-Realism. In addition, the representations of non-Western cultures from an "insider" and a "Hollywood" perspective are compared.

Prerequisites:

GEP 4180 Research and Writing 2

Aims and Objectives:

This course aims to explore central questions in the study of international cinema such as: How do key film movements influence each other? What do national cinemas reveal about the formation of identities and societies? What are approaches to examine the form and grammar of narrative cinema? By the end of the semester, successful students will have:

- A critical understanding of the theoretical approaches to the study of international cinema.
- Further developed a range of skills to research and assess varying source materials as they relate to international films, synthesize available information, and develop academic arguments and reasoned judgments and appreciate national cinemas in their cultural and historical contexts.
- The ability to critically analyse a range of national cinemas and film movements.
- Further developed a range of practical skills in relation to critical writing and clear communication. The ability to link theory, evidence, and social issues, and effectively manage time and independent study.

Assessment:

This course conforms to the University Assessment Norms approved at Academic Board and are located at <https://www.richmond.ac.uk/university-policies>.

Teaching Methodology:

The course includes screenings of extracts from feature films as well as short films. These will be followed by weekly lecture and class discussion. There will be additional assigned films to watch outside of class time. For some assignments in particular, students will be asked to seek out and analyse films of their own choosing as active researchers. Students should complete all the set reading for each week beforehand to participate fully in class discussion.
