Course Description:

This course investigates the cultural, political, historical and industrial development and contexts of post-apocalyptic film, television and media. Students will examine issues critical to the post-apocalyptic genre, covering histories, allegories, and storytelling strategies from the turn of the 20th Century to present day through early literature and contemporaneous media adaptations. Students will also engage with topics that explore Western and Non-Western (centric) perspectives, and a wide range of environmental and economic concerns. The course explores the idea that post-apocalyptic storyworlds offer a means of unpacking why popular culture of the last 20 years seems to resonate with so many notions of 'uncertainty': ascertaining why this genre is exemplary of the evolving hopes, desires and fears of the 21st Century.

Prerequisites:

GEP 4180 Research and Writing 2

Aims and Objectives:

This course aims to explore central questions in the study of post-apocalyptic worlds in cinema such as: How has this genre 'evolved' over the decades and now 'solidified' in its current state? What does post-apocalyptic cinema and media reveal about Western society's identities, ideologies and fears as well as global attitudes outside 'Occident' constructions. What are the significant approaches to examine the form and grammar of post-apocalyptic film and television? Students will in turn explore: a critical understanding of the theoretical approaches to the study of mainstream post-apocalyptic cinema; develop a range of skills to research and assess varying source materials as they relate to the post-apocalyptic genre; synthesize available information and develop academic arguments and reasoned judgments and appreciate post-apocalyptic films in their cultural contexts; gain the ability to critically analyse a range of post-apocalyptic media; develop a range of practical skills in relation to critical writing and clear communication, the ability to link theory, evidence and social issues, and effectively manage time and independent study.
